

The largest wildfire
in Washington history deserves a history-making response

Help us REBUILD
the Carlton Complex Disaster Area

FEMA-DR-4188-WA Carlton Complex Fire Perimeter Progression

Fire Area at a Glance

More than 400 square miles burned—an area four times the size of Seattle

Destroyed:

258 single-family homes

54 cabins

97 shops and garages

163 barns and outbuildings

553 total structures lost;
nearly half uninsured.

$29.5 million—total value of structures lost

Source: Trial By Fire, A Supplement to the Methow Valley News

Twisp: 44 homes
destroyed (9% of households)

Brewster: 65 homes destroyed; 16 significantly affected
(>20% loss of single-family homes)

Pateros: 126 homes
destroyed or significantly damaged
(53% of households)

Carlton Complex Fire Perimeter Progression

Date	Growth	Total Acrea
2014-07-15	1728	1728
2014-07-16	2869	4597
2014-07-16 2359	2679	7276
2014-07-17	33361	40637
2014-07-18 0100	127126	167764
2014-07-18 2054	47394	215157
2014-07-20 0048	22746	237903
2014-07-20 2209	6438	244342
2014-07-21	6806	251148
2014-07-23 0213	118	251266
2014-07-23 2144	226	251492
2014-07-25	25	251517
2014-07-26	137	251654
2014-07-27	152	251807
2014-07-28	219	252026
2014-07-29	672	252698
2014-07-30	1050	253748
2014-07-31	1204	254952
2014-08-01	2929	257881
2014-08-03	779	255164

NOTE: Perimeters are approximate and may change due to more accurate mapping.

Sources: Esri, DeLorme, HERE, TomTom, Intermap, increment P Corp., GEBCO, USGS, FAO, NRCAN, GeoBase, IGN, Kadaster NL, Ordnance Survey, Esri Japan, METI, Esri China (Hong Kong), swisstopo, and the GIS User Community

Damage Assessments

NGA Points PDA Points

- Affected
- Minor
- Major
- Destroyed
- Affected
- Minor
- Major
- Destroyed

Help rebuild lives

In July 2014, the largest wildfire in Washington's history roared through Okanogan County in the north central part of the state, consuming hundreds of homes, barns, and outbuildings in a place where agriculture is the backbone of the economy, supported by agritourism and recreation. It also destroyed forests, habitat, thousands of miles of fences, and hundreds of head of livestock. This is a region that produces apples, cherries, timber, beef, wines, and other foods that all of Washington enjoys.

Of the 312 homes that burned, almost half were uninsured—a common occurrence in remote rural locations, where insurance is often unavailable—because individuals live outside the fire district boundaries—or beyond the reach of people making their living from the land. In addition to losing their homes, many survivors also lost tools, farm equipment, fences, pastures, vehicles, and personal possessions. In a matter of hours, lifetimes of work were reduced to rubble. Following the fire, a heavy rain created massive mudslides that demolished still more homes and cut off access to small businesses along the highway, inflicting significant losses. The mudslides also destroyed roads, irrigation systems, electric infrastructure, and other property.

In all, over 400 square miles—more than 256,000 acres—burned for weeks. The fire destroyed more than physical assets, it crippled many people who were once self-reliant and able to produce goods and services for the larger community. Now they are hamstrung—unable to farm, ranch, or operate their businesses by virtue of homelessness. In the Methow Valley's already tight housing market, rents increased approximately 20%. In Okanogan County, including Pateros, where rental vacancy was less than 1% before the fire, today it is virtually zero. The fire also destroyed the city's only multi-family housing unit. It's difficult to run a ranch, or a farm, or a business when you and your employees don't have a place to live. Rebuilding these fire- and flood-affected communities will require rebuilding individual homes.

We have a plan for doing just that.

"The fire had passed us on the other side of the road that morning.
I thought we were safe, but in the afternoon I got a call from my son.

'Get in the car and get the hell out...NOW!'
The fire was coming back down the valley at an estimated 50 miles an hour.

I had time to grab a change of clothes and a few photographs.

I lost everything else." —94-year-old widow, Twisp

Who is the Carlton Complex Long Term Recovery Group?

The CCLTRG is a grassroots organization formed under the fiscal sponsorship of the Community Foundation of North Central Washington to raise the approximately $4.3 million needed to replace 40 homes for our region's most vulnerable residents. The CCLTRG also coordinates ongoing Disaster Case Management; fills a variety of unmet needs—from replacing dentures to work tools; and continues to lobby for legislative funding and disaster-informed policy changes. Our vision is to see that everyone displaced by the fires and floods is returned to safe and secure housing and that our communities are better prepared to withstand future emergencies.

The CCLTRG is made up of three representatives from each of the geographic areas most damaged by the fire: Methow Valley, Pateros-Brewster, and Okanogan/Malott. Its members are Jon Wyss (chair), Amy Stork (secretary), Jord Wilson, Kris Erlandson, Hank Cramer, Adrienne Moore, Scott Clark, Ron Whiteside, and Carlene Anders (executive director).

The following organizations contribute members, funds, and local community knowledge and resources to the CCLTRG:

Methow Valley Long Term Recovery Organization
Pateros-Brewster Long Term Recovery Organization

“The overall impact to Pateros is nearly indescribable due to the sheer devastation that occurred as a result of the firestorm.

Even large urban areas would have a difficult time without federal assistance recovering after the loss of more than one-third of its housing stock.”

—Gov. Jay Inslee

Okanogan County Community Action Council (OCCAC)
Carlton Complex Assistance Network (CCAN)
Room One
Episcopal Diocese

Partnered for success

The CCLTRG is fortunate to enjoy fiscal sponsorship, institutional credibility, and administrative support from the Community Foundation of North Central Washington (CFNCW). Founded in 1986 to serve Okanogan, Douglas, and Chelan counties, the CFNCW is committed to our reconstruction effort; its executive director chairs our Unmet Needs Committee. The CFNCW has generously agreed to forgo its usual two percent administrative fee for our campaign. Thus, 100 percent of donations go directly to fire recovery.

Demonstrating that what affects part of Washington affects us all, The Seattle Foundation is our partner in connecting us with philanthropic resources and opportunities in King County and beyond.

Washington Voluntary Organizations Active in Disaster (WAVOAD) is playing an invaluable role in coordinating its member organizations in providing the voluntary construction crews essential to our rebuild effort. In addition, a number of VOAD participants have already contributed more than $400,000 to the cost of reconstruction.

Our plan to rebuild

We currently plan to rebuild 40 homes for some of our region's most vulnerable residents: the elderly, families with children, individuals with medical concerns, and people who are unable to qualify for low-interest financing to rebuild on their own. In a rural region like ours, many hard-working people remain low- and even very low-income.

In the spring and summer of 2015 we are slated to rebuild 11 homes. The volunteer crews are lined out; building sites have been cleared; septic systems and foundations are going in. We are currently just $90,000 short for rebuilding these 11 homes. In the fall of 2015, assuming the remaining funds are raised, we will rebuild another 15 homes, and in 2016 the final 14 homes.

Why are we rebuilding individual homes?

Homes are basic. Without a place to live families can't get back on their feet. Our communities lose farmers, ranchers, carpenters, teachers, parents, coaches, business-owners.

Homeowners pay taxes. When people don't have a place to live, the tax base shrinks, leaving fewer people to bear the cost of maintaining the same—or reduced—level of public services.

We care about our neighbors. That's how we build strong communities—by looking out for one another.

Washington—and the nation—depend upon the timber, fruit, beef, and other products grown and raised here.

We're only as strong as our weakest members. By lifting them up, we raise our collective well-being.

The campaign to rebuild

Our goal is to raise the $4.3 million necessary to rebuild 40 homes (at $90,000 apiece); employ a team of Disaster Case Managers through December 2016; and fund the barebones operations and staff necessary to manage the reconstruction. Volunteer crews have already committed to providing most of the labor—meaning that we can rebuild for essentially the cost of materials. Moreover, as we launch our campaign, we have already received contributions or commitments totaling $1.3 million.

Although we are giving ourselves two full years to raise the funds, we recognize that we need to secure at least pledges for the full $4 million by July 2015—the one-year anniversary of the start of the fire.

"I was turned down for insurance because my only source of heat was a wood stove. Anything a person can own, gather, collect or acquire during a lifetime is gone: personal items, photos, papers, memory-joggers, and gifts or artwork that can never come back. Recovery is going to take time. And money. And thought."—Sixty-five-year-old survivor, Chiliwist

"I had a one-room, off-grid cabin that was uninsured.

I had a generator for power, a cistern for water, and an outhouse. When the fire came, I escaped with my cat and a few other things I could grab.

Everything else is gone." —80-something veteran, Malott

Need	Total	Secured	Unmet
Rebuild 40 homes @ $90,000 each, turnkey, including septic, power, foundations, appliances	$ 3,600,000	$ 965,162	$2,668,000
Continue Disaster Case Management funding through 2016	$ 158,450	$ 110,000	$ 48,450
Staffing and operations for rebuild effort through 2016	$ 464,100	$ 220,000	$ 244,100
CFNCW (2% admin fee for fiscal sponsorship)	$ 60,000		$ 60,000
Total	$4,282,550	$1,295,162	$2,987,388

"Even now, eight months later, the kids in our preschool 'play fire.' They pack their bags and 'go to the motel' because their house burned down. Both of our employees and my mother-in-law lost their homes. The wounds run deep. We are all affected."

—Gene Dowers, Pateros

Our funding plan entails grassroots donations, community support, and corporate and government grants; however, the success of this effort will depend upon a select few individuals of significant capacity willing to lead by example.

We are seeking leadership gifts to take us to at least $2 million: one-half of our goal. These individuals—and their gifts—will not only lay the foundation for the entire fundraising effort, but will also inspire others to join them in making a difference. We'll challenge the community to match their generosity.

We are seeking individuals and groups willing to give or pledge $100,000 each, or essentially “sponsor a home.” We have already received several of these pledges from faith-based organizations, who, after pledging to raise the funds to rebuild one home, are challenging other congregations to do the same. We are also asking industry groups, recreational associations, and others to adopt this approach.

Grants, events, and other ways to help

A Seattle-area HVAC contractor is donating the parts and labor to equip two homes with HVAC systems. A paint supplier is donating the paint for 40 homes and the labor to paint one. A local rancher has organized a country music benefit concert, while the Mosaic Arts Choir and Orchestra have offered to perform another. All over Washington—and beyond—people are coming together to restore what was lost.

"I lost my home and all my possessions in the fire. The mudslide washed out access to my property, so I've been living in a borrowed RV in a friend's yard. Although I work fulltime, I'm still considered low-income by HUD. Through the CCLTRG and volunteer labor, I'm hoping to rebuild my home as soon as funding for materials is secured."—Sixty-five-year-old widower, Brewster

Frequently asked questions:

What about FEMA? Isn't this why they exist?

FEMA did approve millions of dollars in public assistance funding to replace public infrastructure that was destroyed—roads, water systems, utilities, and more. FEMA denied individual assistance funding, however, as is frequently the case regarding western wildfires.

What about State funding?

We are working hard to secure State funds to rebuild public infrastructure lost to the fire. The State does not fund individual property loss. That's where community comes in.

What about other fires?

The homes we are rebuilding will be fire-wise structures and include fire-resistant landscaping. The goal is to make the rebuild area better prepared for future disasters, including future wildfires.

We need you.

You are the philanthropic leader who can restore a region that the largest wildfire in Washington history did its best to destroy.

Together, we will fight fire with fundraising.

How to make your gift

Because this is a short-term campaign to meet an urgent need, our goal is to raise the $4.3 million total immediately. Donors who need to spread their gift over two tax years are invited to speak with us about a two-year giving option.

Your gift is fully tax-deductible to the extent allowed by law.

Complete the enclosed giving form and return it with your check made payable to:

Community Foundation of North
Central Washington
9 S. Wenatchee Ave.
Wenatchee, WA 98801

Please write: CCLTRG on the memo line.

We can also accept gifts of stock.

"If there is a silver lining in this disaster, it is the way the county has been working together to rise from the ashes. The first responders did everything possible to help save their local communities, but the fire was so massive, their resources were overwhelmed. We were disappointed when FEMA denied individual assistance, but as the resilient communities we are, we will, through the CCLTRG, complete recovery efforts with the financial assistance of our donors."—Jon Wyss, Chairman, CCLTRG, and Government Affairs, Gebbers Farms

The Carlton Complex wildfire ravaged one of the most beautiful, productive most-visited, and best-loved regions in Washington

Together, we will help the burn area rise from the ashes.

